

SELLING CATTLE TO TAKE CARE OF THE NEEDY

Rustenburg/ Rankelenyane – In our community, the disenfranchised have a place to go, because of the tireless efforts of one man. More than one hundred and fifty physically and mentally ill, homeless or disabled people have been receiving care for more than fifteen years under this man, who sacrifices his best to ensure they do not sleep cold or hungry. In Rankelenyane village, specifically an area called Mabitse – about 40km from Rustenburg, Isaac Masilo started Tlhokomelo Care Centre in 1994 and registered it as an entity in 2004. His vision started when he was working in Johannesburg and was confronted with the desperate plight of the homeless. “This touched me as where I come from in Rustenburg, many people were in the same condition; homeless and ill. It pierced my heart and influenced my decision to leave my job and take care of needy people,” reflects Masilo. To date, he has accommodated a hundred and sixty-eight patients with various impairments – including physical and mental impairments, HIV/Aids, TB, stroke and epilepsy. There is a separate care centre catering for eighteen orphans and vulnerable children who are physically and mentally impaired. The centre has over a hundred and ten beds. “No one funds us. It has always been a struggle to sustain this centre. Some time ago, we received donations from other well known people like the late Baby Jake Matlala who donated a cooling room, Cynthia Chaka from the SABC. The United Nations funded the development of a vegetable garden to produce food – and also generate little money,” Masilo said. “Sometimes I sell some of my cows to sustain the centre. I also slaughter a cow per month when we run in short of food. Every month, we need an estimated sixty thousand rand in groceries,” said Papa, as Mr Masilo is affectionately called by those in his care. Tlhokomelo Care Centre caters for people from as far as Moruleng, Mabieskraal, Tsitsing, Tlaseng, Hartbeesfontein, Bapong, Kanana, Tantanana and other surrounding areas. The centre is non-racial and has accommodated white people as well. Tlhokomelo Care has about fifty staff members; including thirty trained care givers, a professional nurse and 3 ancillary nurses, 7 cooks and cleaners, 3 drivers and 10 gardeners. “All of our staff members are paid. At times we lose our trained staff to other institutions as they seek career advancement,” Masilo said. Masilo said that although their main challenge is funding, they welcome any support in the form of groceries, tables, bedding and other donations. The centre can be contacted at 082-661 5207.

ENJOY BREAKFAST WITH CHAMPIONS THIS YOUTH DAY

Rustenburg – Waterfall mall-goers were treated to a spectacle on Friday, 2 June 2017, when a group of dancers took to the food court in flash mob fashion. The group were promoting the upcoming fundraising event, Breakfast of Champions, to be held at Safari Lodge Hotel in Rustenburg on Youth Day (16 June 2017). Breakfast of Champions is hosted by the non-profit organisation Kingdom Kids Foundation. The theme - What a Time to be Alive - aims to change people's perspectives for the better. Motivational speaker Thabo Magano will give a talk on the day. “With everything that is going on in our country, particularly in Rustenburg where the majority of mines have shed jobs, people's outlooks are understandably negative,” Magano said. “But what people don't realise is that they hold the power to change their own circumstances. They can be the change they want to see.” Founded in 2015 by Kealeboga Lenyibi (26), Kingdom Kids Foundation's goal is to groom children raised in orphanages into role models in society by ensuring they become the best they can be in any chosen field. Lenyibi is a metallurgist by profession. She previously spent her weekends volunteering at a local orphanage and this is what ultimately prompted her to start Kingdom Kids. Tickets for the Breakfast of Champions are R300 each via Quicket: <https://www.quicket.co.za/events/30066-breakfast-of-champions/#/> For more information, contact Refilwe Ramela on 083-383 8124 or email her at: refilwe@kingdom-kidsfoundation.com.
