

SANBS, critical shortage of blood

It appears that November is going to prove to be a testing month – not just for pupils and students writing their matric and other end-of-year examinations, but also for the South African National Blood Service (SANBS), which is experiencing a critical shortage of blood because of the lack of blood drives it can hold at schools and universities.

There is a critical shortage of blood across the country, with blood stocks at just 1.5 days of group O stock, equating to 1 473 units as of 1 November. The situation in KwaZulu-Natal is particularly acute, with less than one day's supply of blood available. The blood supply in the province is currently at 0.7 days of stock (129 units), compared with a healthy blood stock for KZN of 500 units.

The Northern Zone only has 1.2 days of stock available and Gauteng only around 1.5 days. Blood stocks in the Free State/Northern Cape and the Vaal are currently at 1.7 days. It is considered a crisis when blood stocks dip below two days of stock available.

"The situation has in fact reached a critical level in KwaZulu-Natal and we appeal to all South Africans – active donors, lapsed donors and potential donors – to go to their local donor centre and donate blood to bolster the national blood stock," says Silungile Mlambo, national marketing manager for the SANBS.

Mlambo says blood is critical for cancer patients and women in childbirth – who constitute by far the greatest groups of people requiring blood transfusions.

BY TRAINING OVER 2,600 PEOPLE LOCALLY, WE BUILD STRONGER COMMUNITIES.

When Jane Mabiloane, aged 55, from the village of Ga-Mapodile saw an ad in her local paper, she signed up for free artisan training at Glencore's Eastern Limb Training Centre. She also got to participate in an on-site learnership at Lion Smelter which gave her the much needed practical experience. Her experience at the Smelter inspired Jane to study further for her National Certificate. Jane now encourages the youth in her community to further their training and education. She believes that it will put them in a better position to get the jobs they've always dreamed of. Which means they can feed and support their families one day.

Jane is just one of over 2,600 community members who have received training in the greater Sekhukhune, Mashishing and other communities since 2005.

We believe that a single act can make a difference. It creates a ripple effect that can be felt throughout families and communities.

PROGRESS. TOGETHER.
INDIVIDUALS, FAMILIES AND COMMUNITIES.
