THANK YOU PEGLERAE Letter to the Editor

Rustenburg – I would like to give my sincerest thanks and appreciation to the wonderful staff at Life Peglerae Hospital (or Peglerae to us locals). On Sunday evening, 28 January, my daughter rushed me the emergency room after I started feeling sick. Being a widow in my mid 80's; I was frightened and honestly just wanted to stay at home but upon arrival the staff immediately attended to me. For the next four days I was bedridden and absolutely in their care. During this trying time, the staff treated me with care, respect and professionalism. They gave me the impression that they were genuinely concerned for my well-being, not just waiting for their shift to end. That's what inspired me to write this open letter to thank all the staff at Life Peglerae. Thank you from the bottom of my heart! You are a shining example of what a hospital should be!

-With admiration, OumaTokkie

Solidarity Youth empowers young people for professional life

Trade union Solidarity on 1 February launched its interactive youth website aimed at every matric, student and young person who are new to the world of work and are thus on the eve of a new phase of their lives. According to Solidarity marketing manager Marisa Engelbrecht, Solidarity Youth was established to be there for young people in this phase of their lives, supporting them by making knowledge and information available to them free of charge. "Young people's success in the workplace is Solidarity Youth's first priority," Engelbrecht says. This platform is packed with all forms of help and information, including study tips to assist in one's studies and tips for when it comes to one's first job. It also offers information on job opportunities, all of which will empower young people to realise their career dreams and to make themselves indispensable. According to Engelbrecht, Solidarity Youth offers a home for young people, a place where they can dream the future true and which gives them access to career support, funding for studies, internships and many other resources. "If you are about to take the next step in your life, create your profile on this platform and make Solidarity Youth your ally. It comes at no cost and by doing so you can ensure you put yourself on the right track towards excellence," Engelbrecht says.

How can young people access these benefits that are absolutely free?

1. Go to www.jeug.co.za and complete the short questionnaire.
2. Solidarity will send them unique login details by e-mail.
3. They can then sign in, set up a profile and will have access to a budget template, a CV builder, our newsletter and many interesting articles, videos and links as well as lots of useful information.
