A PLANE CRASH

Rustenburg – A Cessna 172 small aircraft crashed approximately 200 meters from a landing strip at the Rustenburg Aerodrome on Tuesday 21 August. Fortunately, the pilot and both passengers survived the crash with only minor injuries. Except for the aircraft's wings, which took a battering from the crash, the aircraft's engine was still in a recognisable shape. It is believed to be an indication that the plane was at a low altitude and speed when the accident occurred.

On Wednesday morning technicians from the Transvaal Aircraft Maintenance disassembled the aircraft to transport it back to Wonderboom in Pretoria.

"At this stage, the cause the accident is unknown," said Andries van Rooyen of the Transvaal Aircraft Maintenance Company. "Our immediate priority is to recover and prepare the wreckage, to transport it back to Wonderboom where the assessors appointed by the insurer can inspect it."
