BREAK THE SILENCE!

Rustenburg – The 16 Days of Activism for No Violence Against Women and Children campaign runs annually from 25 November to 10 December. To show their support for the campaign, the South African Police Service (SAPS) arranged a march through the streets of Rustenburg on Wednesday 27 November.

Concerned citizens gathered at the Rustenburg Taxi Rank where the march commenced, showing their commitment to break the cycle of violence.

Activists chanted: "Men need to know that no means no... every time!" as they walked the route past the Rustenburg Local Municipality and back to the taxi rank. Phokeng Trauma Centre sponsored t-shirts saying Eish... Am I next?

Warrant officer Obakeng Motepe read Justice Crime Preventions Security (JCPS) cluster's pledge where they took an oath to consult citizens about the level and quality of the public service, and that the community will be given a choice about the services that are offered to them.

The pledge further stated that the cluster will maintain a high-level service standard and that the community will have access to all state services. Victims of crime will always be treated with courtesy and will be provided with information. They further pledge to always be open and transparent when dealing with victims. The pledge was signed by the senior state prosecutor advocate Mokhehle Molobye, Community Policing Forum (CPF) chairperson Tienie Bosman, and station commander of Rustenburg SAPS brigadier Gertrude Modise.

Programme director captain Elsabé Augoustides quoted the honourable state president, Cyril Ramaphosa by saying: "Enough is enough and we are going to act. It is time that the government takes emergency measures to deal with the scourge of rape and murder. Each and every woman is at risk of becoming a victim of crime. Crime is not restricted to a group, colour or gender. Men are also becoming victims of sexual abuse. Every child in South Africa needs to feel and be safe."

"It is good to see so many people concerned with the safety of women and children. We should stand together because together we are stronger. Do not look away!" said CPF chairperson Tienie Bosman.

Thank you to all the members of the community who attended as well as the following stakeholders:

- SAPS
- Department of Education
- Department of Correctional Services
- Department of Community Safety and Transport Management
- Department of Justice and Constitutional Development
- Department of Social Development

R4MILLION ABALONE-BUST IN HEKPOORT

Abalone found in the suspects' possession.

Hekpoort/ Magaliesburg – On Monday 18 November, members of the West Rand Flying Squad acted on a tip-off about a suspicious truck traveling from Cape Town loaded with fresh abalone headed to a farm in Hekpoort near Magaliesburg.

According to police spokesperson brigadier Mathapelo, an illegal processing and packaging plant with both raw and processed abalone, estimated at a value of R4 million, was found on the farm. In the building, police also discovered equipment and chemicals suspected to be used during the processing and packaging of the abalone.

Further investigations in the early hours of 19 November, led police to two houses on the same farm, where police apprehended seven suspects.

Police have taken the owner of the farm, a man from Cape Town, a Chinese man, three Mozambican men and a local woman into custody.

The police also recovered two illegal firearms with ammunition. One of the firearms has already been confirmed as reported stolen in Klerksdorp, while the second firearm had the serial number filed off. An undisclosed amount of cash has been seized.

The suspects are facing charges of illegal possession and dealing in abalone as well as the possession of unlicensed firearms and ammunition. Police will further engage the Department of Home Affairs to verify the passport and citizenship status of the Chinese and Mozambican men.
