Rustenburg – A 26-year old man was arrested on Friday 24 April during a failed attempt to defraud the Rustenburg Local Municipality (RLM) of R6 million.

He was arrested while making a presentation on COVID-19 interventions to Rustenburg executive mayor councillor Mpho Khunou and speaker of council, councillor Sheila Mabale-Huma. The man gained the confidence of the two leaders by posing as a representative of a non-existent non-governmental organisation (NGO) with links to the United Nation's efforts to curb the global pandemic. "The man claimed that his NGO supplies personal protective equipment (PPE) and that he intended to donate these items to the municipality," RLM spokesperson David Magae said. "He also said he would supply 70% of the materials as soon as the municipality had paid him R6 million."

The municipality informed police after becoming suspicious and the man was arrested after it became apparent that he was trying to scam them. He also faces charges of contravening Regulation 11B(1)(a)(i) for failing to confine himself to his place of residence and Regulation 11(B)(a)(ii) for moving in-between provinces. Police found him in possession of a fraudulent essential services permit.

The man, who will appear before the Rustenburg Magistrates' Court, is also a suspect in a pending fraud case in Gauteng.

Meanwhile, some business owners running retail outlets in the Rustenburg central business district have either been arrested or fined by the municipality for failing to comply with COVID-19 regulations. This was part of an initiative to enforce pronouncements by President Cyril Ramaphosa aimed at curbing the spread of the pandemic. "A total of 64 vehicles were impounded during this weekend's operations and fines amounting to about R200,000 were issued," Magae added.
