SA – In a country where violent crime is an everyday reality, new behind-closed-doors discussions to tighten South Africa's firearm laws have ignited outrage.

The South African Gunowners' Association (SAGA) has sounded the alarm after discovering that a certain government body is allegedly brokering secret talks on amendments to the Firearms Control Act (FCA). Even more alarming, the firearms industry, sport shooting bodies, private security sector, and lawful gun owners have been completely excluded from these discussions.

This isn't the first time concerns have been raised. There have been talks around these proposed amendments for a while, and on 27 August 2025, SAGA raised the alarm again, warning South Africans about what is at stake.

What's on the table?

- Cutting down privately-owned firearms.
- Stricter licensing for self-defence firearms.
- Heavy restrictions on private security firearm use.
- New, onerous rules for storage, transport, and justification.

But here's the real question: Who will protect us?

If ordinary citizens are stripped of their right to own a firearm, who will be able to defend them? Private security companies? Not likely — they're targeted too. What about the thousands of farmers and families living far away from help? How are they supposed to survive an armed attack if their guns are gone? And let's not pretend the answer is calling the police. South Africans know the truth: SAPS is under-staffed, under-resourced, and overstretched. That's saying it kindly.

A dangerous contradiction

The very idea of reducing lawful firearms in a country with one of the world's highest crime rates raises an obvious contradiction: Why make law-abiding citizens more unsafe in a country already so dangerous?

South Africa's firearm sector contributes billions to the economy, supports rural livelihoods, fuels hunting, sport shooting, and conservation — and most importantly — provides people with a fighting chance where the state cannot.

A call for transparency

SAGA insists that no changes to firearm law should even be considered without the firearms community at the table. "Disarming the law-abiding does not disarm criminals," the association stresses.

South Africa doesn't need secret deals or politically convenient decisions. What it needs is transparent, fact-based firearm policy that protects rights, livelihoods, and public safety.

Caroline Werner murder trial postponed yet again

Rustenburg — Nearly three years after the tragic murder of 31-year-old Caroline Werner, justice remains painfully out of reach.

On Monday, 25 August 2025, the long-running murder trial of Solly "Moya" Molefe (22) was once again postponed — this time because the court had no running water. Proceedings were moved to the following day, 26 August, but instead of continuing, the matter was remanded for further trial within a tribal court until 11 September 2025.

Adding to the delays are new arguments being raised in Molefe's defence. His legal team is attempting to prove that he was assaulted while in police custody — a claim that the prosecution is challenging. The dispute has now become yet another reason for the trial's slow progress.

For Caroline's family, each postponement cuts deeper. What should be a pursuit of justice often feels like a cycle of excuses and bureaucracy.

"Every time we prepare ourselves for answers, we're sent home with nothing but more waiting," her mother told Platinum Weekly.

Caroline's life was stolen in September 2022 when she was found murdered near the R24 and Dinie Estates Road. "We want closure, we want peace. But most of all, we want justice," her family said.

In loving memory of Caroline Werner — a vibrant, joyful soul whose absence leaves an ache in every heart that knew her. Forever missed, never forgotten.

Lights back on at Karlien Park Clinic

Rustenburg — The Karlien Park Clinic is once again able to serve patients after electricity was restored last week, thanks to urgent action by the Democratic Alliance (DA).

During an oversight visit on 27 August 2025, DA councillor Luan Snyders discovered that the clinic had been left without electricity due to unpaid municipal bills. The Department of Health had allowed arrears to build up to a staggering R178,000, leaving staff and patients quite literally in the dark. Following engagements with the municipality, electricity was reconnected on Friday, 29 August. However, R119,000 in outstanding debt remains unpaid.

"Healthcare facilities must always remain functional, and bureaucratic negligence cannot be allowed to endanger lives," Snyders stressed. The power cut had jeopardised critical healthcare services, especially for vulnerable residents who rely on the clinic for primary healthcare.

The DA has committed to following up with the Department of Health to ensure the bills are settled and that the clinic is never placed in this position again.

VACANCIES — VAKANTE POSTE

Rustenburg — The quest for justice in the tragic murder of North-West University (NWU) student, Onalenna Selebogo (21), continues to weigh heavily on the Rustenburg community. Onalenna was found brutally killed in a Tuin Street flat, Rustenburg, on 3 August 2025, her body discovered wrapped in sheets after being stabbed multiple times in the neck. Her boyfriend, Walter Tshehlo (29), stands accused of her murder after fleeing the scene and later handing himself over to police.

The case, which has already drawn national attention, was expected to move forward following bail proceedings in August. However, it has now been postponed once again — this time to 30 October 2025 — to allow for further investigations.

Onalenna's death has become a painful symbol of South Africa's ongoing struggle with gender-based violence and femicide. Friends and family describe her as a bright, promising young woman whose future was stolen too soon.

Bafokeng Magistrates Court in Tlhabane – declared unsafe, it was briefly closed, forcing some cases to be postponed under a tree before reopening on 1 September 2025.

Justice under a tree?

Tlhabane – The Bafokeng Magistrates Court in Tlhabane was abruptly closed on Wednesday, 20 August 2025, after inspectors declared the building unsafe for both staff and the public. The inspection revealed that the structure was in a dire condition, leading to an immediate shutdown. The closure caused major disruptions. Dozens of cases were postponed, leaving detainees to wait longer behind bars while their families continued to shoulder the burden of legal fees. In a scene described as surreal and deeply troubling, court proceedings were reduced to being conducted outside under a tree – only to postpone matters to later dates. The good news, however, is that the court confirmed it resumed operations on Monday, 1 September 2025. Still, the temporary shutdown highlighted just how fragile access to justice can become when infrastructure is neglected.

Water Quality A Key Focus of Magalies Water's Service Excellence

Magalies Water is a well-established water board responsible for operating the Vaalkop Treatment Plant. The treatment plant is equipped with advanced water treatment technologies to purify raw water to potable water standards. Specifically, drinking water produced by Magalies Water from this scheme is measured against the SANS 241 Drinking Water Standard specifications. The water utility implements comprehensive risk assessments supported by tailored incident management protocols and risk-based monitoring programmes to identify problematic parameters timely, allowing for the immediate implementation of remedial corrective actions to address and mitigate risks. Routine monitoring of water quality is conducted through an ISO/IEC 17025:2017 accredited laboratory, ensuring the reliability of the results produced.

The produced water gets distributed to Moses Kotane and Rustenburg Local Municipalities through distribution networks that connect from the Vaalkop Treatment Plant. Based on risk indices, SANS 241 categorises water quality according to potential health impact, which includes Acute Health 1, Acute Health 2, Chronic Health risk, Operational risk, and Aesthetic risk. The overall performance of the Vaalkop WTW, along with Moses Kotane and Rustenburg Local Municipalities, for the period April 2025 to June 2025 is summarised in Table 1.

Table 1: Water quality profile for the Vaalkop WTW, Moses Kotane, and Rustenburg LM from April 2025 to June 2025.

Risk Category	SANS 241 Limit	Vaalkop WTW	Moses Kotane LM	Rustenburg LM
Acute Health 1	≥99%	100%	100%	100%
Acute Health 2	≥99%	100%	100%	100%
Chronic Health	≥97%	97.63%	99.25%	98.91%
Operational	≥95%	91.45%	92.32%	87.03%
Aesthetic	≥95%	99.80%	100%	99.84%

As summarized in Table 1, it is evident that the water produced and supplied by Magalies Water to Rustenburg and the Moses Kotane Local Municipality meets and exceeds the minimum requirements for health-related indicators, with minimal operational challenges. The water quality is acceptable and suitable for human consumption. The compliance with water quality standards exceeded the SANS 241 targets for all health risk indices that can impact consumer health and water aesthetics. The raw water quality over the last decade has deteriorated drastically, and this could be attributed to upstream catchment activities, which lead to the ingress of contaminants and nutrient enrichment into the Vaalkop Dam. The Vaalkop Dam is highly eutrophic, which has led to algal bloom and water hyacinth coverage of the dam. Magalies Water, along with the Department of Water and Sanitation (DWS) and stakeholders, are evaluating resource management strategies in a quest to protect the catchment.

As a countermeasure to poor raw water quality, the water utility has invested in robust technologies, including the addition of advanced technologies such as chlorine dioxide, to ensure water quality compliance while minimizing operational risk. The operational non-compliance, particularly the turbidity non-conformances at both the treatment system and the municipal distribution system, can be attributed to multiple factors, such as aging infrastructure, demand management strategies, and poor raw water quality.

However, through our risk-based water quality monitoring programme and incident management protocol, as well as innovative technological applications at our treatment works, Magalies Water remains committed to supplying drinking water that is fit for human consumption.

HAVE YOUR SAY

Have you ever seen something that doesn't align with logic or accepted scientific laws?

From strange lights in the sky to unexplainable coincidences, many people have reported experiences that defy reason. Some call them miracles, others mysteries, and a few believe they're simply misunderstood science. What about you — have you ever witnessed something that made you question what's possible?

"Yes, I once witnessed a shooting star. It streaked across the sky so quickly, yet it was breathtakingly beautiful. In that moment, I closed my eyes and made a wish. Until then, I thought shooting stars only existed in movies — seeing one in real life was magical, and truly unforgettable."

Magda Seyffert,
Rustenburg

"Yes, I have. Once, I saw a glowing sphere hovering silently in the night sky before it vanished. To this day, I still wonder if there's a scientific explanation — or if it was just my childhood love of sci-fi shaping how I saw it."

Mashao Ramabale,
Rustenburg

Did you know?

Veld fires aren't just dangerous—they're incredibly fast. Under strong winds, flames can race across grasslands at speeds of up to 20 km/h. That's faster than most people can run, and quick enough to trap and kill wildlife that can't escape in time.

Beyond the visible flames, the intense heat and smoke spread devastation, destroying habitats and threatening both animals and people. This fire season, stay alert, report fires early, and remember: prevention saves lives.
